product to cap
off the top of
any wall

Why use coping stones

Coping stones are used to cover the tops of walls that are generally built from block, brick or stone work. Their primary function is to protect the wall and increase the life span by stopping natural elements such as rain, snow, ice etc from causing damage. Another reason is they look appealing to the eye. A wall does not look finished until it has its hat on.

There are a number of reasons to use slate when you are capping the top of a wall. It is a very easy stone to work with and needs very little or no maintenance. There are instances of churches in France who had parapets and roofs built with slate in the 13th century and is still in use today.

We offer a cutting service for slate copings so that you can design your wall to suit you and not have to worry about cutting it to shape or size.
